

Assistant Professor of Instruction
Department of English

The University of South Alabama's Department of English invites applications for three non-tenure track (9-month, continuing) full-time Assistant Professor of Instruction positions to teach primarily freshman composition courses. Departmental, college, university, and/or community service is also expected, along with research consistent with a 4/4 teaching load. Positions begin starting August 15, 2027.

Required: a Ph.D. in English or related field with a minimum of 18 graduate hours in English and evidence of strong commitment to teaching college freshmen and sophomores. Applicants should also demonstrate a research agenda and extensive teaching experience related to teaching composition and literature.

To apply, send the following by email: vita, cover letter, one-page teaching statement, and names of three references to Dr. Larry Beason, Search Committee Chair, c/o English@southalabama.edu.

Applicants invited for a campus interview must arrange to have three letters of recommendation and official transcripts directly sent to the Search Committee Chair, Dr. Larry Beason, at lbeason@southalabama.edu. Official transcripts must be sent from the Registrars of all colleges and universities from which the applicant received a graduate and undergraduate degree.

Review of applications will begin October 23, 2026, and continue until the positions are filled.
